Practicing Medicine for the Patient

From birth, Narjust Duma was destined to be a surgeon, like her parents. Instead, she fell in love with the relationships she built working with patients with lung cancer. It's lucky for her patients that she became a clinical oncologist.

How Screening Centers Are Bringing Patients Back

When the coronavirus shutdowns hit, a lot of primary and preventive care shut down with the pandemic. Slowly, as clinicians switched to telehealth appointments and facilities set up protocols to protect non-COVID-19 patients, patients started returning for treatment and routine care.

Updates from GO2 Foundation's Centers of Excellence

Last month GO2 Foundation welcomed two new Centers of Excellence (COE) in Lung Cancer Screening: Robert J. Dole VA Medical Center in Wichita, Kansas and Hunter Holmes McGuire VA Medical Center in Richmond, VA.
